STANZAS ON ITALY.

There is a charm upon thy ancient shore,
There is a spell apon thy classic breeze,
A something that untwines the thoughts, of yore That clung round home and all its sanctities. Make me my home upon Italian plains

Beneath the shadow of Rome's mighty wall; And let me dream, that bound in willing chains The world still clusters round the Capitol. Still let me gaze on those divinest forms The magic marbles of creative mind, Stillet me drink the living light which warms

The canvas where immortal art is shrined. ill let me feel the airs, with sweets opprest, That floats from you enamell'd mountain's brow, 'M'd heavy vines, that weave their jewell'd vest Along the light Casino's front of snow.

Still let me gaze upon that glorious sky, An arch of glowing and intenset blue, Unequally, save by ocean's kindred dve, Flashing to Heaven its own resplendent hue! And that sweet language, liquid, graceful, strong,

Still let its calence my pleased senses soothe, In bland accordance with the land of song, The charms of nature, and bright lips of youth. But no! it must not be-my soul returns, Pinck'd by a chain, invisible, though fast-Nor mock me thus with visions of the past!

A TRAVELLER'S RECOLLECTIONS. I have been for many years a rambler, but chiefly through Europe. The traveller's club was not established when I began my career, and I therefore was not under the necessity of booking myself for China," as is required by the statues of that great locomotive metitution. A simple sight of Mount Caucasus was enough for me. I ventured only within a days sail of Columbia; and saw no more of New Holland, than might he communicated by the sight of a native, whom I met in a whaler, embalmed by order of the governor of Sydney, as a present to the Zooogical Society. In my wanderings, too, I differed from the tourists of this world in another point. I eschewed picture galleries, cathedrals, crown-jewel offices, and "glorious chateaux," that no man living could distinguish from a Dutch stable. An English one would offer no comparison. My business was with man, much; and with woman, a little. I have always thought a man of sense, to the full as amusing as the tallest steeple that ever pierced the sky; and the colour on a lovely female cheek worth all the carnation ever laid on canvas by the pencil. From the pomps of Palladio, and the magic of Titian, I turned to living lips and eyes; and, though the whole world of Dilettanti, measuring-rod and sketch-book in hand, must be struck dumb at my gothicism, I am still wedded to my heresy, and shall, to the last, think that the happiest description of brick logue of pictures lose its gaiety, and that, while we have our senses about us, the pleasantest "study of mankind is man."

As the specimens of this unusual study rose pefore me, I frequently made brief memoranda. sufficient to mark the leading features. Of those I shall give you a few in succession. My first is of a beautiful creature whom I met at Vienna. She was French, but with a grace and Italian look of sensibility that seldom honours the countenance beyond the Alps. Strange to say, with my picture-antipathy, my first knowledge of her was from a picture.

I was one morning at the Leopold Museum, where all Vienna flocked to see the portrait of Madame de M. I contemplated it with a pleasure justified by the perfection of the features, and the inish of the execution. The beauty of the original had augmented the talent of the ar-

The grave Imperial Aid-de-camp who accompanied me, after smiling at my long trance of admiration, proposed to introduce me to the acquaintance of the model, and in the evening conducted me to the soince of the Comtesse de M. The portrait of the salon lost much of its merit in my eyes, as soon as they caught a glance of the original .-The painter could not seize and arrest on the canvas the grace which distinguished each motion of the young Comtesse. The spirit and animation that heightened her slightest expression, that mingling of dignity and affability, which reflected itself on her countenance, rendered it one of the loveliest, one of the most seductive. that I had ever seen. After having dispersed her card-tables-arranged the players-seated her Boston in the middle of the room-shut up in a corner the eternal picquet—the fair Comtesse came to rejoin, at one extremity of the apartment, a little group, so lucky as to escape the distribution of the markers and to prefer to the melancholy pastimes of whist or ecarte, the more rare pleasure of an agreeable and spirited conversation.

At the moment of the Comtesse's approach, a young privy councillor maintained—perhaps rather too warmly—that it was impossible to be deceived as to any one's origin, and that a cortain air of dignity, in the whole appearance, betrayed, in spite of themselves, those who had the honour of being born in the privileged classes. This opinion was also that of an old lady, who finished all her phrases with-"as the late baron used to say"—and was opposed by a su-perior officer of most distinguished air, and an ex-minister, who had their own reasons for what they said. At last, to give an example that must lead every one to his side, the orator addressed the mistress of the mansion, and triumphantly inquired, whether, let fate have placed her in whatever inferior situation, her noble birth would not have been at once recognized from her air and manners. The beautiful Comtesse gave a smile at the words.

"What an unfortunate illustration, Monsieur de L.," said she. "What, Madame-are you not the daughter of a Comte?"

"Of a baron?" said the old lady. "No."

"Of an officer?" resumed the colonel. "No." "Of an admi.istrator?" added the ex-minis-

"You deceive us, Madame," replied the young privy councillor; "you certainly are of a family..."

"Of honest people, but who positively had no titles to boast of," said the Comtesse, smilingly. "You can vouch that I am no bettee than I assert," she continued, turning to the friend who had introduced me. She was, at the instant, called away to decide some point at one of the tables; and, while the observations exclted by her frank declaration were rapidly crossing each other, I inquired of the Aid-de-camp. "Who was the heautiful Contesse!"—" She shall tell you herself," replied he. "I have at home her sketch of her own memoirs. She lent it to me, and I will lend it to you for she seem as little anxious to conceal what she has rise from, as what she has risen to."

My way lay through his street—he gave me the manuscript as we went home, and I read, before I siept, as follows:-

"My name is Angelique L'Arjou; I was born at Neuilly. My mother, who was surnamed the Belle Paysanne, died a few days after I came into the world, and her husband did not long service her. An orphan from two years of age. I was reared by an aunt, who, having he child, became a second mother to me. Since the death of my parents, her garden had acquired a great increase—she had inherited all her sis-ters' customers, and her sole ambition was to make me the bearer of the finest fruits and flowers in the vicinity of Paris. I approached my fifteenth year. The animated glances of the young men who sought to meet me-the illtemper of the young girls who avoided me-and the anxiety of my aunt, taught me that I was handsome. I had suspected it myself for a year back. But one is never pretty with impunity. All the youths of Neuilly paid court to me; however, though I cared for none, I thought proper not to offend any. Their rustic flames did not teach me how one can love-but their rustic eulogies' taught me how one can please; and, with a little memory, lessons of this sort are not soon forgotten. "For a whole year I maintained a sage equiibrium among all my suitors. My aunt, who and the rage of husbands-she was the widow of her third-selected a spouse for me-a youth f my own age; the son of a rich tradesman .had never seen him but once, and I accepted him with sobs. Already were the marriage trinkets purchased—the contract was even drawn when an accident that I had the luck to up, meet, broke my marriage, and began my fortune. "In one of my visits to Paris, in entering the Hotel de Suede, Rue de Richelien, my foot slipped, and I sprained my ancie. My screams and sufferings attracted a number of the strangers who lodged in the hotel. Among them was an old gentleman who appeared to feel a lively interest in the accident; he did not quit me an nstant, and his benevolence exaggerated danger to allow him the pleasure of offering his attentions. In the fear that the slightest movement would augment my sufferings, he would not hear of my removal, and, on the spot, sent off his carriage and footmen for my aunt. She off his carriage and roothien to my arrived—visited me—condoled with me—embraced me-was in despair-confused he with excuses, lamentations, thanks-and, finally, yielding to the reiterated entreaties of my w guardian-she granted him a moment's are-

"Monsieur de Villefort was an old bachelor, who had spent his life in amassing wealth, without knowing who was to spend it. He had no heirs but very distant relations, who had, at various intervals, given him hints that he had been old for a long time. Those hints, at lest, grew displeasing. One morning he quitted Grenoble, and came to Paris, with the intention of lisinheriting his relations. Marriage appeared to him the most ready and certain means. My ap-pearance pleased him; my youth had interested him, and he selected me for the instrume.rt of his vengeance. My aunt took good care to of-fer no refusal. She dismissed the Neuilly bridegroom--published new banns-conducted me to he mayorality-led me to the church-made me utter one little word in its proper place-and Monsieur de Villefort told me, with great cere-

three years from my marriage. I shall regret him all my life. He left me all his estates—his relations attacked the will-they lost their cause—and they appealed. It was necessary that I should go to Crenoble. To have right on one's side is a fine thing-but solicitations, recommendations, and importunities, have also their merits; and at law we should neglect nothing. I knew no one in this province, where I came for the first time; my residence was at the Lion d'Or; the windows of my apartment looked to those of a colonel of infantry, who, I knew not how, but I knew why, contrived to be always in my way. In a provincial town, a stranger has always the privilege of exciting curiosity. The motive of my journey was quickly as-certained; and my adversaries had the address to circulate little anecdotes of scandal, to pre-judice the public opinion. Through one of those chances—common enough in the history my life—the colonel read one of those libels; be was indignant, nor could be persuade himself that I was such as they painted me. He asked permission to present himself to me. He came professed the profound attachment with which I had inspired him, and offered me, with true military frankness, his sword, his time, his at tentions, and his heart. I accepted ell; and I did well. Born in the environs of Grend was connected with the greater number of my judges; he saw them-spoke to them-ced them of the solidity of my pretens

"I could not dissemble to myself the obliga-tions I owed to the colonel; he had powerfuly ac-conded me, and his zeal had succeeded in destroy. ing the reports raised by the relations of h sieur de Villefort. Each day his visits became more frequent, his glances more expressive, his conversations more animated. At last he hazarded a demand for his reward; and, be it wisdom or be it caprice, I found myself wedded a second time, without having had much more hand in it than the first.

"At the expiration of a few months my band was called to join his regiment; but, led on too far by his courage, he was killed at the battle of Nuremberg, and I became a widow for the second time, at the age of two-and-twenty. As his family were allied to the best families of the province, I naturally found myself count ed with the most distinguished persons of Dac-phiny; and those connections contributed in acslight degree to correct whatever might have remained of the manners and habits of my child-

hour; he assured me he would interest his self in my request, and next morning he brought me the letter of admission. As the reward of this service, he asked permission to visit me, and had no deficelty to obtain it. Some days afterwards the comts demanded my hand—I really think I would have offered it to him.

As they draw up the contract, my names—which of course I was obliged to declare—draw from him an exclamation of joy and surprise that he was not sufficient master of himself to restrain. This poor Comte de M.——loved me through reminiscence neve expecting to discover in the the pretty little flower girl of Neuillythe shiret of his first partion. On my side, how could I have recognized in the man I now loved, m whom ten years earlier I should only have noused, because I could not help it. The Pear is a luscious fruit, although, perhaps not as innocent and healthful as some of the finer kinds of the Peach. Nevertheless, several varieties of the Pear, as the Jargonelle, the Bon Christien, the Burgamot, the Vergalouse, and the Brown Beure, are desirable in their season, and peculiarly gratefulto the taste; and if not too freely indulged in, innoxious and healthful. The native, or wild Pear, on which after transplantation in the garden or orchard, the finest kinds of the Pear are engrafted, is of a hardy nature, and endures for several generations. The engrafted tree is, perhaps, less hardy, yet if it is guarded, for a few years, from its feeble yet destructive enemy, (and it requires but little labor so to do,) it will produce abundantly for many years. It is the design of this communication to point out this enemy, so fatal to so many of this kind of tree; and also the means of its destruction. It is a feeble folk, produced from an egg deposited on the underside of a leaf of one of the leading and topmost boughs, by an active wing-ed insect of the size and somewhat resembling a ed insect of the size and somewhat resourced from winged ant or pismire. I say it is produced from this insect, because I have an egg deposited by this insect, because I have covered it on every tree on which the worm has made its appearance. The worm very soon gives signal of his fatal presence. The leaf to which he is attached begins to curl a little, and soon becomes sear, assuming at first a light, and then a deep brown color, an almost immediate stop is put to the growth of the shooting branch, and the leaves contiguous to the infected one, begin to assume the same dismal hue, and the vivid green of the stock turns to a deadly black. The trace is now dead at top. The descending poison is somewhat rapid in its progress, as I have known a bough of some 8 or 10 feet, blighted and dead in less than as many weeks. So soon as the poison reaches the turns the stock of th poison reaches the trunk, the other branches wither and die, and the tree is destroyed by a

I have thus, as minutely and accurately as I am able,—described the deadly effects of the worm. I now turn to his description and extir-

Se soon as a leaf is discovered to be discolored, pluck it, and pluck it as near to the bough as possible, (lest some of the poison should de-scend from the stem of the leaf into the stock,) and the tree is safe. Beneath the leaf, enveloped in a closely woven web, will be found a sluggish, slimy, loathsome worm, from an eighth to half an inch long, according to his age. Crush him beneath the foot, and the enemy of the Pear tree is destroyed. If through inattention a bough should be so far infected by the poison, saved, if the poison has not reached the !runk, by cutting it off below where there is any discosation between the outer and inner bark.

From the first of May to the middle of June, in this climate, according to the advance of the season, is the time to be on the look-out for the appearance of this destructive worm.

A single word as to the Peach tree producing, at once, a fruit the most delicious and lesome of all the American fruits, the sweet Orange of the Floridas not excepted.

ar away the earth a little from the roots, and wherever the gum is seen exuding, scrape it off, together with a little of the external bark of the tree, and pour a quart or two of scalding water about the wounded parts and it will de stroy the norm which is so fatal to its longevity. This should be done when the buds for the bloswom begin to swell, and so far from injuring the tree, it will invigorate it.

HYDROPHOBIA. "About three months ago, a large French dog, belonging to one of the officers, was observed to grow uncommonly surly, and attempted to bite at every dog he met in the streets: this change of temper in the animal was attributed his master, who was very fond of him, to by his master, who was very rolled that had his having eaten a quantity of meat which had been given to him, highly seasoned with pepper, a.c. However, to wards the evening of the day on which the change in the animal was perceived, he became at intervals quite outrageous, and bit his master and two more officers who happened to be in the room: notwithstanding, his master was inclined to think it was done more in rude play than any thing else; consequently no measure was taken to secure him. evening I saw the dog, and thought him uncommonly ruffled, when I attempted to caress him; and was patting him on the back, he turn ed at me and growled, although he used to violent, and furiously bit at several dogs who crossed his way; still unfortunately, no measure was taken to secure him, his master supposing that nothing was the matter with him. On the evening of the second day, the dog was lying in his master's room perfectly tranquil, when this unfortunate young man, who has fallen the victim, entered; he remained in it some time before the dog took any notice of him; however, he suddenly made a spring at him, seized him by the shoulder, and pulled him to the ground, and tore the arm down to the shoulder, and was with ficulty taken off him. A sergeant of the reginent happened to enter the room on duty about this time; the dog seized him by the leg, and tore away a considerable portion of flesh; he bit also two soldiers, one by the nose and the other on the hand. Still the animal was suffered to be at large and even slept in his master's room, by his bed-side, and licked his face repeatedly. The following morning the master of the dog began to feel some alarm; I advised him to have him shot; he agreed. As we were going to the spet where he lay, he bolted up, snapping at every thing which came in his way-He passed by me, I called him, but he did not notice close by me, I called him, but he did not notice me. He ran through the streets of Dublin, bit a number of dogs and a child; he attempted to seize a man, who fortunately had a hammer in his hand, with which he struck him on the head and killed him. The tongue of the dog was immediately cut out upon the spot by a physician, who on examination pronounced the animal to have been in an advanced stage of hydrophub's None of the officers or soldiers who had been bitten knew the decision of the physician; nor did they know of any ill effects having arisen to those who had been bitten. How-been bitten died in about six weeks, ashibiting symptoms of hydrophobis.

All this was kept secret, therefore no cause of alarm from report could have excited hydrophobic feelings in the unfortunate young man who has fallen a sacrifice; on the contrary, he was in high spirits, and applied for leave of absence to go and see his friends in Worsestershirs, as he had some intentions of being married. He obtained leave, thinking it might divert his attentions, and he left us with the same few of spirits. During his absence all was forgetten; and those remaining who had suffered, (though not quite so severely,) recovered their cheerful habits. The period of leave granted to my poor friend having expired, he set out from his father's house a few days ago, in perfect health, to rejoin his regiment. (This he told me a few hours before he died.) When he get to Birmingham, he said he had a curious taste in his mouth, which made him not relish his breakfast, as usual. However, it gave him so alarm, nor as usual. However, it gave him so starm, no did he again think of it till he got to Shrewsbury when he found he had a disrelish to both eata bles and drinkables when put before him, al-though be felt an inclination to eat and drink when not before him. He could not account for this, but observed he felt no alarm, until he called for porter, feeling thirsty. When it was brought he put it to his mouth, but the moment he took a mouthful, he dashed the glass from is lips and spit the porter over the table, and I believe the passengers rose up and said he was mad. This extraordinary feeling of not being able to eat or drink, though he wished to do so, caused him some uneasiness, though he was willing to believe it was the effect of a sore throat, and comforted himself under this idea. He proceeded by the coach to Holyhead, ruminating what could be the cause of this sensation. when the coach passed a small lake of water. he surface of which being ruffled by the wind he immediately shuddered at the sight, and with a kind of horror he could not describe hid his face with his hands:- for the first time. the dreadful idea of hydrophobia struck him.

When he arrived at Holyhead, he wished to rash before dinner, and called for water; when was brought to him, and in the act of putting towards his face, he screamed violently, threw the water about the room, and was convulsed for some time: the servant left the room, alarmed. He then tried to clean his teeth, but could not get the brush into his mouth, on account of the water remaining upon it. The packet by this time was ready to sail, and he embarked. Poor fellow! while he was relating his sad tale to me, we were sitting together by the fire side. he having just landed from Holyhead, which place he sailed from the night before; consequently this was the third day only since his atack at Shrewsbury. He had then been on shore about two hours, and had ordered a coach. and drove up to the royal barracks. Before he began to tell me, on his arrival, of the sympoms he had experienced on his journey, h greeted me on our first meeting with, " How are you, my dear fellow? Here I am at last returned, but I fear with hydrophobia!" I affected to laugh at it, but was much shocked, and replied, it could only be imaginary: he said, could not be so, for he thought he should have died coming on shore in the boat; he was so much affected at the sight of the water, that they were obliged to cover him, in order that he might not sec it. He also observed, that if he had remained on board one day longer, he felt convinced that he should have died mad. I was still inclined to think there might be a good deal of imagination in my friend, and endeavored to dissuade him to believe so; although I cannot describe the poignancy of my feelings at hear-ing him relate what he suffered at intervals ince he left Shrewsbury.
In the course of our conversation, some dog

began to bark in the barrack yard; he sprang up ddenly from his chair, looking over my she der, and said in a hurried manner, ' Dogs!' If I were to live a thousand years, I should never forget that moment; something struck me so forcily that the poor sufferer would die, that I was afraid to meet his eyes, fearing he might discern signs of alarm in me, from emotion. He was in the act of peeling an orange, which we had persuaded him to try to eat, as he had taking nosmall piece into his mouth, but as soon as he felt the liquid, he became greatly convulsed, spit out the orange, and gave an inward scream. When he recovered himself, he burst into a fit of laughter, and said, 'There! was not that like the bark of a dog?' A physician arrived soon after, who is eminent in Dublin. As soon as he entered the room, the poor fellow apologised to him for hav-ing given him the trouble to come, as he thought he had symptoms of hydrophobia, but believed it was only the effect of a sore throat, therefore would give him no further trouble. He appeared to catch at any thing which might give hopes of life. We were very anxious to know the decision of the physician; on his leaving the room, upon inquiry, he pronounced his death inevitable. is unnecessary to describe the state of our minds on receiving this melancholy news:-to know that our brother officer with whom we were conversing, to all external appearance in perfect health and apparent spirits, was to be numbered with the dead in a few hours, was deeply distressing; the doctor added, that he was in an advanced stage of hydrophobia; that bleeding him copiously, in order that he might die easy, was the only thing that could be done for him. I remained with him some time, conversing with him about various things (though completely forced on .my part,) as his spirits remained good. On leaving him, I asked him when he intended to dine at the mess, he replied he could not dine with us that day, but he hought he should be able to do so in a day or two, when his sore throat was better. After he was bled he felt relieved, thought he should sleep well, and hoped to be able to drink water by the next morning.—Some time after, in the evening, he appeared at intervals rather wild and confused, and told an officer to get out of his way, or he would bite him. Afterwards he became more tranquil, and sent his compliments to one of the married ladies of the regiment for a prayer book: but begged it might not be mentioned, or he should be laughed at. About midnight he became very violent, so that 3 men could scarcely hold him; he afterwards recovered a little, and fell into a kind of slumber, which was disturbed by his springing up now and then and crying out, 'Do you hear the dogs?' in a quick and hurried vocie, he also imagined at times that he barked like a dog. He requested he might be left alone, about I o'clock in the morning, his servant only remaining in the room, when, in about ten minutes, he looked up to the man, quite calm and collected, and said, 'he regretted his mother and sisters were not with nim.' He then prayed a short time, turned himself round, burying his face in the pillow, and expired without a groan .- Such was the melancholy end of one of the finest young men in his majesty's service.

FROM THE NEW YORK MEDICAL JOURNAL THE LATE DR. POST. ARTICLE IX. - Some Observations on the Use of Anodynes and Opium, in the treatment of Inflammatory Affections, by the late Da. WRIGHT POST. In a letter to VALENTINE MOTT, M. D., by F. G. KING, M. D., of New York. In reply to your enquiries as to the use of anolynes and opium by the late Dr. Post, I have to remark, that in conversation with him some two years past, relative to Dr. Armstrong's practice in inflammatory diseases, he told me that the use of opium, as recommended by that gentleman, (except in larger doses,) was corroborated by his own experience for a long series of years, and that to him it was by no means a novelty; for in 1804, he was called to a child about three years of age, suffering under a violent pneumonic atcian; nor did they know of any ill effects hav-g arisen to those who had been bitten. How-brile excitement. That the accordingly bled, ber, the child died; and three dogs which had placing him under the use of antinuonials, but all without benefit. Matters proceeded from bad to worse, until the child, exhausted by constant cough, and excessive restlessness, seemed nearly at the point of death. Under these circumstances, he determined to quiet all these irritating symptoms by a powerful anodyne, and accordingly exhibited sixty drops of laudanum. Two hours after, he was called to the child, then supposed by its parents to be dving. He found the posed by its parents to be dying. He found the features sunken, the surface covered with a cold clammy sweat, and secretions of an unpleasant appearance about the eyes and nostrils, but the pulse had diminished in frequency, and was more full; the respiration was slower, and every thing indicated the full and desired action of the and dyne. The parents were astonished to hear the physician say that the child would soon be betler. The next morning all untoward symptoms had subsided, and the child became rapidly con-

This was his first trial of anodyne in such affections; his experiment, if you please; but a few months afterwards, a similer case occurring be immediately resorted to the anodyne, d pletion and evacuents having been premised and with similar success; since which period he has generally continued that mode of practice; latterly, however, substituting the Dovers' powder in the place of laudanum, in pneumot

In 1810, he was called in consultation upon gentleman in Jersey, suffering under enteriors. He found that he had been repeatedly bled, blistered, and evacuated, but to no advan tage; the pain still continued acute; and the ulse was small, frequent, and chorded; the skin dry and hot. Under these circumstances he suggested the propriety of exhibiting a powerful anodyne, in order to quiet all irritation and give nature an opportunity of recovering herself. After a little hesitation on the part of the attending physician, it was finally determined to adopt the course proposed, and 100 drops of laudanum were directed; an hour elapsed no sensible effect having been produced, when the dose was repeated, and in a half an hour the patient was under its full influence. He awoke the next day free from pain or tenderness, and so recovered. The same gentleman has been frequently attacked since with the same affection, and uniformly, after being bled and evacuated, he has recourse to his anodyne, which rarely fails to quell the disease. But to be efficacious, the dose must be heroic, at least such was the opinion of Dr. Post, who often remarked, that practitioners, especially in England and France, were not aware of the value of opium in inflammatory diseases; for even when employing it in such cases, their doses were too trivial to exert any marked influence over the malady. He himself always exhibited it under the opinion, that to obtain its soothing effect upon the system, and its paralyzing influence ever the disease, it must be given in large doses In diarrhea, and certain conditions of dysentery after having cleansed the passages, he employ ed laudanum or Dovers' powder with the hap-piest effect; in fact, he rarely used much else han salts and Dovers' powder in diarrhra, in adults. In his own case he was no less prodi gal of anodynes than with his patients. Being, as you well know, for many years a constant prey to pleuritic affections, his treatment of him self was short and efficacious, viz. blisters, and purgatives, followed by eighty or a hundred drops of laudanum, which quieted his cough, allayed pain, and soon placed him in a condition to resume his business. In conclusion, permit me to state an occur rence which took place under my own eyes, two years previous to his death. He was then violently attacked with pleurisy, accompanied with much fever, for which he had been purged and blistered, and, at the period in question, was under the use of antimonials. At this time he directed me to give him seventy drops of laudanum. I remonstrated, directing his attention to the dryness of his skin, its increased heat, and the frequency and hardness of his pulse. His answer "Believe in my experience rather than in your theory; give me seventy or eighty drops of laudanum, and an hour will convince you of propriety." It was given, and within the hour his pulse became calm, full, and slow; his skin condition strikingly improved. He left his bed the next day, and frequently since has he said to me, "I think I have given you a clinical lecture that you will remember."

Such, my dear sir, are the facts concerning which we some time since conversed, and if they can be of any service to you, employ them as you think proper.

PHILADELPHIA:

TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 23, 1829.

The Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania, on Saturday last, elected JAMES C. BIDDLE, Esquire, Secretary and Treasurer to that Institution.

It seems hardly credible that such a receptacle for human beings, as that of which we copy a description from the READING MERCURY, still exists in any part of Eng-LAND; much less in a populous and thriving

A few days since we paid a visit to the Corperation gaol of this borough, and we should not do our duty to the public if we did not call its serious attention to this abode of human misery. The debtors' sitting apartment is a dark and dreary room of small dimensions, the temperature of which was at least ten degrees higher than that of the atmospheric air, and of most offensive odour. A bed, (in which one of the debtors sleeps,) was placed at one end of the room; and six human beings, whose pale and emaciated faces showed the ill effects of their imprisonment, crouched round a small fire, from which, we are told, they could scarcely ever be induced to move during the day. The way to two of the sleeping apartments is through the sitting room; the further sleeping-room is in dimensions about ten feet by eight, and the other is about eight feet square; in each of these there is a small pallet bed, and the light and air are admitted by a vent-hole in the thick wall of the prison, about nine inches square, across which placed a strong iron bar; this vent-hole is not glazed, and the night air can only be excluded by means of a small wooden door in the inside. hich covers the vent-hole, but fits very imperfectly. The principal sleeping-room is divided by the staircase from the sitting-room; this leeping-room contains three small palet beds, within a foot of each other; the beds in all the sleeping cells are placed upon the floor, and are made of the coarsest materials. The window, or vent-hole, is on on side of the cells only, so that a thorough ventilation can never be obtained; the glass of the casement of the sitting-room was broken in several places, and, consequently, a violent current of atmospheric air was constantly rushing into the room, so as to produce. during the day, great inconvenience to its wretched inhabitants, without being sufficient to restore the wholesome properties of a pure atmosphere, which their animal functions had de-It is probable, however, that during the night the occupier of the bed in the sitting-room mus be greatly inconvenienced by the admission of the cold and damp air. The sitting-room is day and night constantly occupied. The vard appropriated to the use of the debtors communicates with the dungeon described, by means of a narrow passage: it is very small, and surrouded by lofty walls. On entering, the only object which strikes the eve, and destroys the dull uni formity of the bare walls, is a privy, standing in bold relief, surrounded by a dung heap, which contains a quantity of decayed vegetable matter. We were informed that the prisoners seldom avail themselves of the privilege of exercise in the yard; for their depression of spirits, caused by the deselate aspect of the place, is so great, that they feel no inclination to bodily exertion to the preservation of their health. A few days before our visit, a seventh debtor had been immured within the walls of this dismal dungeon; there was no room for him in the place e have described, and we found him pacing the felons' ward, in which similar disgusting objects to those which attracted our attention in the debtors' yard, first presented themselves. The felons' cell, into which he showed us, was a small room, about six feet high, without a window. On one side of this cell was a small bed, belonging to the prisoner, on the other a heap of straw, and the prisoner had to choose between the occupation of this room, and a small and damp room on the ground-floor, under the debtors' regular apartments. In the felons' ward was a cesspool, which was very offensive; and the prisoner stated that the place was infested by rats. The felons' cell, we were informed, had been previously occupied by the horse of the mace-bearer of the corporation There is no water within the walls of the prison, and it can only be obtained from the gaoler by knocking at the outer door of the prison; the whole interior of the gaoler's view, and his dwelling-house is a distinct build ng. In case of fire, or sudden ilness, or accident, in the night. it would be scarcely possible for the prisoners to make themselves heard by the gaoler, wo sleeps in the front of his dwelling-house, next the street. There is no infirmary or sick-room in the prison; the magistrates of the borough seldom pay their prisoners a visit, and the clergy religiously ab-stain from visiting the sick and afflicted in the time of their tribulation: no religious or moral instruction is ever communicated to the prisoners. It will scarcely be believed, that the prison we have discribed exist in the great and enlightened borough of Reading, and that upwards of 200 human beings yearly have to endure the physical punishment and moral degradation which its accumulate horrors and deprivations inflict upon

A portion of the inhabitants of the PAPAL dominions, while the throne was vacant, seized the opportunity of representing their grievances, in a petition to the Cardinals assembled in conclave. We annex the paragraph in which their wants are stated. The only remedy suggested is the general one of the "institution of universal and well organised laws."

"Fathers, and most excellent Princes,-Before you proceed to elect a successor to Leo XII, be pleased to listen to the voice of truth, which is addressed by the subjects of this unhappy state, to you, who are the present arbitheir fate. Truth is too much encompassed with danger easily to reach the throne of an absolute sovereign; but to your august assembly, who have the power of imposing laws on the throne itself, it may easily find its way, and it ought to be heard.

"It would be superfluous to enumerate the wants and the evils under which we have been labouring for a great number of years. To whom are they not notorious? We are not permitted to make them known by means of the press, but they are the common topic of conversation, and they speak with sufficient eloquence. in this shape, of the opp. assion to which we are exposed.

· We have judges, for example, who are not legally constituted, but being established on the mere foundation of traditionary usage, are more liable to perplex than simplify duties devolving on them; while the enormous expense of prosecuting a legal claim often paralyses the intenions of justice. We have no code which classifies crimes, and provides a fixed punishment .-Our citizens have no rights and no security .-Our figures are regulated by no principle political economy. The springs of commerce are dried up. National industry is impeded, in- | bel complained of. Anastion was brought upon stead of being assisted. There is no public in- | this letter which was brought in avidance. It stead of being assisted. There is no public in-struction. We labour under a perpetual increase of wants, without any visible means of relieving them, with a continual fear of werse evils, and indifference to all prospects of amelioration .-There exists at once universa; discouragemen and extreme distress. And yet how prosperous and fertile might be this fine part of Italy, committed to the care of the Roman pontiffs have a soil capable of yielding every useful production, two seas surrounding our territories numerous rivers traversing them, and people of quick intelligence, pliant in their habits, and

One of the latest numbers of the Loxpos l'ines contains, in the form of a letter from MANCHESTER, a more minute account than is to be found elsewhere of the recent riots at that place, with various speculations on have already given :-

As far as I can learn, there is this important distinction between the present riots and those of 1826. In that year a sudden and violent suspension of trade threw tens of thousands of workmen out of employment. In the present time, the prevailing distress of particular classes of the operatives, as they are called, has been gradually accumulating, until labour no longer furnishes the means of human subsistence. The prospect of such a state of things is both gloomy appalling. The absolute extinction o large bodies reared to a particular trade cannot contemplated without a degree of horror from which humanity shrinks, and yet it would appear that "to that complexion it must come at last." The markets are not overstocked, and the general cotton and calico trade has o late assumed this peculiarity. In former times the shopkeeper had his regular periodical time of purchasing, which was systematic, and the manufacturer could calculate with something like certainty upon the extent of the demand: late, such has been the progressive decline of the markets, and such the competition even in this suffering trade, that the shopkeeper has watched the market almost weekly, and, availbought from day to day enough to feed the de mand of the consumer, and successively profitted by the fall in the price of the article.

I find this singular fact in the present state of things in Lancashire, which is a striking illustration of the blindness and infatuation of the workmen, under the wide-spreading organization o their vile clubs and confederacies. The great suffering undoubtedly afflicts the hand-loom gaged in the fabric of printed cottons; for they are, by the process of machinery, unhappily for themselves, obliged to compete with the powerooms under the obvious disadvantages to which hand-work must always be exposed, with the perfect certainty of mechanical action; and yet the singular fact is, that the "turn-out" prevails among the spinners, who are comparatively well employed, and who have evidently funds arising out of the combination of their mischievous clubs which maintain them in idleness. There ar thousands of spinners, now for nine weeks i this "turn out," in Stockport and Macclesfield, who are praised for their tranquil demeanour, when they ought rather to be exposed to th wholesome exercise of the tread-mill. There is besides, this infliction attending a turn-out of the spinners: each of them has, from the nature and process of his work, four or five attendant hands, performing mere manual functions at the mahine, and in the best of times wretchedly paid for this subordinate labour. The moment the pinner stops work, these men are necessarily brown out of employ, and the magistrates, as it appears to me, do not properly distinguish be-tween the cases of these individuals. They refuse, and nothing can be more proper, parochia relief to the spinners. When an applicant comes, he is asked where he last worked, and a reference is made to the factory; if he is of the subordinate labourer is mostly, from what I can learn, mixed up with that of the spinner, though they are in general as essentially different as voluntary from involuntary culpability. There is gkreat heat of feeling between the masters and men, and the consequence is a disregard of distinctions at both sides, which increase mutual affliction. The poor-rates do not seem to have increased in Manchester to the degree which the statements of general distress would warrant, and the inference consequently arises, that there is some exaggeration in the complaints of suffering which are daily heard. For the last eight or nine weeks the demands upon the poor-rates have increased considerably; nevertheless the present churchwardens are going out of office with about £29,000 in their rate-chest-an unappropriated advantage which is unusual even in tranquil times. There is a remarkable circumstance connected with the late disturbances which would tend to show that the popular feeling is not so excited as some people wish to represent it. The walls are covered with placards ssued by the magistracy, not one of which has

during the whole week been defaced. At the factories which were attacked, the pro prietors disclaim any grounds for criminating their own workmen; and the latter equally deny any participation in the plunder of their masters Boys and women, thieves and pickpockets, appear to have chiefly composed the crowds which to the disgrace of the police, sacked the tradesmen's shops last week in this large town; and most remarkable fact was yesterday stated by Mr. Lavander to the magistrates, who were en gaged at sessions in hearing the cases of the rioters in custody-"that in the pocket of every prisoner taken by him in escaping with the plunder of the bakers' and butchers' shops, he order. found money." Some of the ruffians so detected have been committed as felons, while others were sentenced as rogues and vagabonds to dif ferent terms of imprisonment and hard labor. An anxious desire has been expressed to fasten pon the lower class of Irish, which is numerous this town, a liberal portion of the criminality of the recent riots: there have been of late large incursions of weavers from the north of Ireland seeking for work, and as the brand of perpetual disorder is always kept hot for their brow, the occasion was at once embraced of applying it. The description I have already given you of the age and sex of the parties principally engaged in these disturbances, and the condition of the pockets of some who were taken, furnish the best refutation of this idle calumny. The attractions for the wandering Irish are few Manchester; the rate of wages is as bad as wha they get at home, the price of food infinitely dearer, and the first application for the poor rates is often met, by carting them to the nearest seaport, and steaming them back to their own country.

Persons were called who had known the plaintiff from her infancy, and with whom she had lived previous to going to Mrs. Affleck, and Mr. Kelly contended that it was impossible for any young girl in her situation to otherwise disprove the allegation against her, he submitted; that if there had been any truth in the statement, the defendant might have easily found a witness to the fact, or at least have ; :ured the person from whom she stated herself to have heard it. The two questions which the Learned Counsel contended ought to have been left to the Jury. were first, whether the letter was a bona Ade answer to the letter addressed to the defendant. their causes and consequences. The fol answering it without straying from the inquiry: lowing extracts may be added to what we or, whether it did not infer malice when coupled with the evidence. The Learned Counsel cited two cases in support of his application, and wished to press the consideration of this case on the Court, as the plaintiff, from her situation in life. would, failing in this application, be unable to relieve herself from this ruinous charge. The Court were of opinion that the defendant could not be called upon to prove the allegations contained in the letter, or to produce the person whom she stated had told her. They considered that the letter could not bear a presumption of malice; as, if the plaintiff had behaved herself with propriety while in the defendant's service, she could easily have called some other of the defendant's servants to her general behaviour. The Court thought, therefore, that those questions should not have been left to the Jury, and refused to grant the rule.

It must not be thought unfeeling to remark that Lord NELSON's quarter of an hour would have prevented the pain and inconvenience which this gentleman has endured by waiting till the last moment. Captain PARKER's celerity was the subject of general remark and approbation.

A term of the Circuit Court recommenced in this city on Monday of last week, Judge Duer presiding. One of the causes which came on for trial is unquestionably of general interest.-We allude to the case of Gibbs vs. McClellan. We give a very brief statement of some of its principal features, as near as we can collect the facts at this time. The plaintiff, several months since, was thrown from a wagon by the upset-ting of it, and by the fall his leg was broken below the knee. The defendant, a physician, residing in Nassau, in this county, of respectable standing, and of some eminence as a surgeon, was called upon to take the proper measures for restoring the plaintiff to the use of his limbs or rather the limb to the use of the plaintiff.

The fracture is healed, but the leg which has been injured is somewhat shorter than the other, hence the plaintiff is crippled.

The declaration charged the defendant, Samuel McClellan, with malpractice as a surgeon. There were two counts, one charging him with a want of skill, the other with negli gence and inattention to his patient. The plaintiff had a compound oblique fracture of both bones of the leg, below the knee; defendant was called to reduce the fracture-he did reduce it properly, as stated by all the witnesses on both sides, and placed the limb in an extension box, so called, applying permanent extension. The counsel for the plaintiff placed their principal reliance for success, in showing that defendant was liable for want of skill in placing the limb in this extended position, with permanent extension. They endeavoured to show that a flexed position of the knee joint was the best and only proper position of the limb in cases of this kind. Three witnesses, Drs. Anderson, Spoor and Croswell, were examined, who stated it as their opinion, that the extended position of the limb ras improper and reprehensible, and that the other position mentioned was the only proper one. Drs. Hale, March, Wing, and others gave a decided preference to the mode made use of by the defendant in this case, and that a limb when treated in the flexed position was invaria-bly shortened. Medical authors, as the physicians all agreed in testifying, differ in opinion as to the modes of treatment. This being the case, the court suggested to the counsel for the plaintiff, that this point need not be further urged, as it would not be for the court or jury to decide upon a surgical question on which surgeons hemselves, the most eminent in their profession, disagreed. This point, therefore, was given up, and it was admitted that the fracture was re duced in a scientific and surgical manner.

The plaintiff then introduced testimony to show a negligence or want of skill in the subsequent treatment. The crippled state of the plaintiff was the subject of much inquiry. On the part of the defendant it was contended, first, that due skill and every necessary attention were applied to heal the plaintiff, and, secondly, if the crippled state of the plaintiff was attributable to any unavoidable cause, it was to the conduct of the plaintiff himself, in neglecting or refusing to follow the directions of the defendant. as his surgeon; whereby the measures pursued by the defendant, were prevented from producing their ordinary and natural effects. Many witnesses were carefully and minutely examined on both sides, in relation to these points. The examination of the testimony commenced on Thursday of last week, and concluded on Tuesday afternoon of this week. The summing up by the counsel and the charge by the court oc cupied the evening of Tuesday and the forenoon of Wednesday. The jury retired, and in about half an hour returned to the court with a verdict of six cents for the defendant. Counsel for the plaintiff, Messrs. Darling, J. P. Cushman and Huntington, all of this city; for the defendant, Messrs. D. Buel, of this city, H. P. Hunt, of Lansingburgh, and Jordan of Hudson .-Troy Budget.

CANAL FROM THE GULF OF MEXICO TO THE ATLANTIC.

Magnolia, (M. Florida) May 29 .- We have been favoured with a perusal of the report of the Board of Engineers on this subject. The document is one of great interest-ably and faithfully executed, and demonstrating clearly the practicability and utility of the contemplated work. The resources for supplying the canal with water, are clearly shown, the route pointed out, and its termination at each extremity settled, in the West, in St. Mark's river; in the East, in St. John's, to communicate with the St. Mary's by a sloop canal. The survey embraces three routes; the first commencing at the mouth of the St. Mary's and terminating in the Suwanee: the second commencing at St. John's River, and terminating in the Suwanee; and the third commencing at St. John's, and terminating in the St. Marks. The board recommends the latter, as the most advantageous, not only as affording a good harbour, and sufficient depth of water, which is represented as being no where else to be found on the Gulph Coast, at the necessary points for its termination, but in its presenting greater local benefits in the facilities thereby afforded to the trade and transportation of the richest portion of the Territory. The point of its debouche being the termination of boat navigation and the commencement of shipping, will create the necescommercial depot for the produce of the west, designed for the Atlantic markets, and for importations brought thence in return. To say nothing of the advantages which it will afford in time of war, for the safe inlaed conveyance of munitions, provisions, supplies, &c., and for the speed and facility of forwarding military and naval operations, the facilities of come will be greatly improved, by lessening the dis-tance and avoiding the dangers of the naviga-tion round the Peninsula—the most hazardous of any on the American coast. Whatever doubt of the practicability, as well as benefits, of this great national work may remain, an attentive perusal of the report—the high character and cientific acquirements of Gen. Bernard and the other members composing the board, must effectually remove.

Extract of a letter from a respectable citizen of North Carolina:-" Allow me to add that the mineral wealth of our State is just beginning to be developed. Great quantities are daily found in Burke, in the alluvial deposit; and recently, very rich veins have been struck upon in this, (Rowan) county. In Wilkes, Rutherford, and Surry, it has lately been discovered in such quantities, as to warrant the erection of machinery. We are going on with machinery in this, Cabarrus, and Davidson counties. In Mecklenurg, machinery is very extensively in operation, driven by steam, water, and horse power. The water power is preserable, where it can be had conveniently; and steam next. Horse machines are put in operation with the least expense at the first instance; but attending expense afterwards is greater than either steam or water, in consequence of its either breaking down or killng the poor animals so soon. Some use pounders, others stone grinders, similar to mill stones. the latter are preserable; but a Mr. Folger, who has been engaged in the South American mines. has a pa ent for using them, and asks $500 for a single right: this deters many from using them -and induces the adoption of divers contrivances for pulverizing the ore. Where the stones are used, ore is considered worth working when it yields I dwt. per bushel; but in many instanes ore has yielded 75 dwts. to the bushel: this , however, considered very rich; for 2 run of stones, with four or six old blind horses, will grind 50 to 75 bushels per day. There is a good deal of excitement on the subject. Every owner of land is in good heart, and holds his hitherto sterile acres, which were not considered worth the taxes, at a high rate."

A letter from a gentleman at Key West to his friend in Richmond, after noticing the murder of Mr. M'Rea, by Hawkins, adds-"I wish I could here close the scene; but this circumstance has given rise to acts of greater atrocity, if possible, putting in jeopardy the lives of the friends of M'Rea, and those who have dared to sympathize for his untimely end. The friends of Hawkins and his brother, who is here, all men of desperate fortunes like themselves, have declared war against all those who are suspected to be in the least friendly to the opposite party—and while writing this, I am compelled, for my own security, to keep a brace of pistols lying by my side. The Judge of the District has been threatened. and in fact we are almost in a state of civil war. The cutter Marion arrived to-day from a cruize, which adds somewhat to our security.'

We learn from the Key West Register of the 4th inst. that the Revenue Cutter Marion, Capt. Jackson, sailed from that port on the 3d inst. for St. Augustine, having on board Capt. Charles 2. Hawkins, and George S. Hawkins, Esq.
The Grand Jury for the Southern Judicial Disrict of Florida, in their general presentment at the May term, strongly press upon the attention of the government the importance of erecting a jail in Key West. The number of mariners on the island, engaged in the wrecking business, and constituting a majority of the population, following the habits of seamen on shore, render such a building necessary. A small one, twelve feet square, has been erected by the Town Council of Key West, by subscription; but the Territory has no jail. Several persons have died in the small one, from too close confinement. Extract of a letter from the correspondent of the Baltimore Gazette, dated Callao, February 12:-"We have no news of moment from the Northern Army; the last accounts advertize us of a slight skirmish of our out-posts somewhere in the neighbourhood of Loxa. An interesting correspondence has taken place between the French Consul General, and the Minister of Foreign affairs, Don Justo Fejuerola, in as much as the Peruvian Government claims the right of drafting resident unnaturalized foreigners in the Civicos, a military corps, that during the absence of the regular soldiery, maintains the Civil Po-lice of the country. The French Diplomatist denies the right of the government to extend a military jurisdiction over French citizens domicilated in Peru, and his protest is doubtless susained by the usage of civilized governments, and writers on international law. I do not know whether our citizens have complained of this nfraction of public law, although as it equally ucludes all alien residents, it is a tenable ground of protest. A foreign citizen would compromit his neutral character by the discharge of public duties, and as a soldier, whether regular, volunteer, or drafted, could hardly be permitted to plead from an invading enemy, exemptions from the Military Laws to which his situation rendered him obnoxious.

"FEBRUARY 26th—I have only time at this noment to say that we are all well-we have just returned from Lima, where we have been since the 22d, celebrating the anniversary of our Washington's birth day. The Captains and supercargoes gave a handsome dinner on the oc-casion, and upwards of sixty Americans attended. have no time to give you particulars, but we njoyed ourselves."

Nashville, Tenn. June 9 -The Hon. John M'LEAN, Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, arrived in this town on Saturday vening last, promptly to enter upon his official duties here; and yesterday the annual trial term of the United States' Circuit Court for the district of West Tennessee, commenced at the City Hall; present, Judges M'Lean and M'Nairy. JAMES COLLINGSWORTH, Esq. our new Dis-trict Attorney, likewise entered upon the discharge of his public trust .- Banner.

Charleston, June 16 .- We understand that on Friday evening last a flash of lightning killed two horses dead, and wounded a third so that he has since died, about 3 miles from Columbia, on the Winsboro' road, belonging to some wagoner who had stopped during the storm. Two negroes near the place, we are informed, were at the same time much stunned, but soon reco-

We have reason to fear that if the excessive rains, which have fallen for several days past. continue much longer, the cotton crops will be much injured, as the wheat already is.

Augusta, (Geo.) June 11 .- The Locusts, which are numerous in the swamp and the oakwoods in this vicinity, are destroying the leaves of the fruit and forest trees in some part of the country. They have not yet attacked the growing crop. They are so numerous in the swamps below this city, that a respectable planter told us the other day that his hogs were getting fat on them. They are small, but little larger than the large horse-fly, and make a noise like the tree frog.

A team, consisting of six horses, was killed by the lightning, near the Planter's Hotel, during the storm of Monday evening last. Beside lightning and thunder, a heavy wind prevailed which have blown down fences, &c. and level ed the corn, whose hold on the earth was weakened by a deluge of raip,

Mr. Hall, whose horses plunged into the well on the Columbia road not long since, met with a similar accident the other day. A horse from his livery stable fell into a well in the country, and was extricated alive from his perilous situ-ation, though the well was said to be deep, by the humanity and intrepidity of Mr. Robert M'Keen, who, in vain, offering ten dollars to any person who would descend and fasten the chains he had collected round the horse, bravely descended into the well himself by a plough-line, where the horse was struggling in his uneasy position, and secured the object of his solicitude such a manner that he was drawn up, and is likely to recover.

By a most unfortunate accident, the owner of the animals lately brought for a show to this town has been deprived of one of the lest attractions to his exhibition. The OSTRICH, a very fine specimen of the kind, owing to the slipperiness of his cage floor, a few mornings since, received a fall which fractured both his legs near the hip joints, and occasioned his death a few minutes after. This animal was two years and a half old; ten feet and a half high, and weighed 305 lbs. His value to the owner and the severity of the loss may be understood, when it is stated that $3000 were offered for him in New York. The body after death, was opened, and several cornelian stones were found in his stomach; received there, no doubt, in his native country. He had been caught some time, as the accident occurred just twelve months after his having been shipped, for this country, at Havre .- Newburyport, Mass. paper.

On Sunday about noon, a fire broke out in the lumber yard of Messrs. C. & W. Maule, in Front near Noble street. The early attention and successful labours of the firemen, prevented any extensive ravage by the fire, though some considerable injury must have been sustained from the hurry in which piles of boards were overturned, in order to get at the fire beneath .-There is little doubt, we believe, that it was the work of an incendiary. It was mentioned to us, that the same premises were set on fire about four months since, nearly at the same time of day, and on Sunday .- U. S. Gaz.

NATURAL PHENOMENON.

In the Memoirs of the Imperial Academy of St. Petersburgh, it is stated that in the district of Gori, in Russia, at the foot of the Ossentin mountains, there is a hill, on the stony surface of which the humidity that exudes from the rock, in summer and in fine weather, is converted into ice of a thickness proportionate to the heat of the sun! This ice disappears in the night or during cloudy weather, so completely, that the rock is scarcely damp. The water ob tained from this ice, when melted, appears upon analysis to contain only a very small quantity of lime, and not any other foreign matter.

A man said to be from New Castle, Delaware, was arrested and committed to prison by 'Squire erguson, on Saturday last, for attempting to ass two counterfeit notes in Lexington street. They were on the branch of the Farmer's Bank of Maryland at Easton, dated Sept. 27, 1827, letter D. Nos. 1879 and 1822, payable to N Hammond, signed, John Pinkney, Cash., H. H. Harwood, Pres't.

Crowds of respectable persons are daily going out to be PAGODA and LABYRINTH GARDEN, to take the Chinese Panacea, to driak the Chalybeate Water, and Burton's Imperial, to hear the Lectures on Phrenology, see the Antediluvian Toad, the Boat that glides through the air without the aid of water or steam, and the living Gazelle.

A CURIOUS DISCOVERY. Chinese Sensitive Leaf, INVESTED BY JAN PERTISTA CHASEICTO. THESE Leaves, pleasing even at first night, are able to divert a whole company; their imparial judgment gives sufficient matter for jocose entertainment; and if care be taken to put them between the earers of a book, they will never lose their virtue.

To know the temper of a person, place the Leaf in the palm of his or her left hand, and it will immediately pain of his or her left hand, and it will immediately move off itself. If the person is of a sanguine temper, it quickly rolls itself up and fells from the hand. If he is of a choleric temper, it rolls up and moves towards the wrist. a cholerie temper, it rolls up and moves towards the wrist.
If of a phlegmatic temper, it will only bend a little and remain in the palm of the hand. In the hand of a peron of an even temper, it will move in a very pleasing manner, neither too last nor too slow, the same as if alive;

on, at first sight, will not know them to be ar-These Leaves, in the shape of a Fish, Chinese Women, Mermaids, &c. are to be had wholesale and retail, at No. 23 Chesnut street, Philadelphia; and at the principal Looking Glass and Fancy Stores in this city.

Piano Forte Manufactory. THE opportunity afforded by the winter months, has enabled the advertiser to replenish his ware Room, anticipating, as usual, at the opening season, an influx of demand for the article in which he is happy to say his success in the proximity to per-fection has exceeded his most sanguine expectation. The ready sale of these improved Piano Fortes is, and has been, a most satisfactory test of this fact, and it is a matter of no small moment to offer again his unleigned thanks, for the almost unparalleled encourageat with which he has been met, by his friends of Country as well as the City.

In thus tend-ring his grateful regards to his fellow citizens and patrons generally, he avails himself of the opportunity of offering an entire new assortment of the st productions from his Manufactory, which certainly will need no verbal recommendation from himself, assared as he is that his instruments can speak purely and firmly for themselves. The expenses of this establishment being perhaps less than any other in the city, he feels encouraged to say that country merchants who may be venders or have orers, will further their interest in the two fold vie jud cious and pecuniary advantage in giving him a Pinno Fortes repaired neatly and promptly. REBURATIO EXIZER. UST received and for cale by the aubequiber.

DR. DEAN'S RHEUMATIC ELIXIR, prepared from the same articles that constitute his calebrated Patent Vegetable Rhenmatic Pitts, well known to many in this city, and of which nearly 200,000 boxes have b directions accompanying each bottle, will give to the public, facts respecting the medicine, and the high opinion the doctor entertains of it from actual experience. The Rheumatic Elixir which I now offer the public for trial, will be found, for common use, the most safe, effectual and pleasant physic ever offered; being comlispose to take cold like other physic, and may be take at any time. It gives an appetite, assists digestion, and carries off all crudities from the stomach. It may be taken by females in circumstances to great advantage. If, ken by females in circumstances to great advantage. If, on taking cold, some of this Elixir is taken on going to bed, it will be found to operate kindly the next day, and carry off any bad effects which might have remained of such cold, if it had not been taken. Families will find, by a free use of this Elixir, that one half at least, of the usual services of the physician may be dispensed with, usual services of the physician may be dispensed with, and at the sametime get rid of many chronic complaints, which cause many to drag out an unhappy life.

This Elexir being a very diffusible stimulus, it excites the natural action of every part of the body, thereby resteres suppressed perspiration on taking cold, which is the cause and lays the foundation of a large proportion of the disorders which the human body is subject to. The Elixir can be more easily taken by some people and is much better adapted to some constitutions and to some cases of disease than the pills. These are all disor-phlegmatic state of the stomach and bowels, and a cold, nactive state of the blood and juices, in which state are inactive state of the blood and juices, in which state are chronic Rheumatism, sick or nervous head-aches, pervous and rheumatic pains of the stomach and bowels.

For the above complaints, and the following, the Elixir will be found eminently useful, viz: recent coldsecoughs, unattended with fever; a particular affection of the face, called Tie Deuloureux; diarrheas and dyentaries not attended with fever, worms in children, when there is always a cold, phlegmy state of the bowels.

The Elixir will be found to be advirebly a facet of The Elixir will be found to be admirably adapted to resist the effects of a foggy climate, and may be termed an excellent antifogmatic. - The jaundice being a dieen of a cold phlegmatic nature, it is well adapted to

In injuries of any particular part of the body, rheu-matic complaints are very apt to fall on those parts, and much retards the cure, in such cases the Elixir has been found a very useful assistant in restering the injured part.

In seasons when particular epidemic complaints prevail, the Elixir, by keeping the howels open, and the blood in natural action, serves as a good preventive to such complaints. CERTIFICATES.

Dear vir—The medicinal article you sent me I have made trial of, though not so fully as I could have wished.
It appears by your letter that you have long been in the practice of using it, particularly in Rhoun arise cases.—
From what I have seen of it. I have no doubt of its possessing rare victors in that compaint, and that a preparation in spirit would be well adapted to choose cases, as that would render it more difficulties in its effects. id render it more diffusible in its effects. The following Certificate is as presumed will satisfy the most incredulous.
